Listen, Learn, Collaborate
Enabling Sustainable Change in Rural Education

The Gyan Prakash Foundation Experience

What role can non-profit organizations play in enhancing the quality of public education in rural India? GPF’s experience shows that collaborations with institutions that share common beliefs about learning processes, to build an inclusive, community-driven learning model, is the only way towards creating a movement for sustainable change across the education system.

The steps (and missteps) taken by the Gyan Prakash Foundation (GPF) during the first 11 years of its continuing journey is captured in this book, and provides useful guidance to those wishing to enter this complex and often bewildering terrain.

The book has also been translated into Marathi. The books will shortly be available on amazon.com and bookganga.com. Please follow us on LinkedIn and Facebook to stay updated and get your own copy.